Notes: I also had trouble getting an image of the Teeth poster and the year it was published. I found two possibilities for the image.

Another image of this one appears to have come from a newspaper and the note at the bottom suggests it was one of the early posters which would make it circa 1986 when the series started.

I struggled to classify this example of Milligan in Print. It is not strictly a broadsheet but perhaps is a different form of broadsheet.

The London Underground began displaying poems on poster in London Underground trains in 1986. The posters have also been sent to libraries and schools throughout the UK. Spike Milligan has had two poems published as part of this program.

Teeth Poem Book Print 1985

Format: Poster

Illustrations: unknown

Physical Description: poster

Notes: This image was found on Pinterest, notes with it suggest it was salvaged from a book of children's poetry but available from esty.com. The Esty website suggests it is not available anymore.

Notes:

This poster is full of mystery. I have not trimmed the image from Pinterest. The publication details come from a Pinterest entry; there are three of them.

The number at bottom right could be a page number. The edging on the left also suggests the image has been taken from a book. Was it taken from a book and sold as a poster?
